

Eggless Low-Carb Lemon Protein Tea Cake (Whey Isolate Version)

A balanced healthy dessert: lower carb, moderate protein, and actually enjoyable.

Dry Ingredients

- 35g almond flour
- 18g unflavored grass-fed whey isolate
- 8g coconut flour
- 12–13g powdered monkfruit/allulose sweetener
- 1 tsp baking powder
- Pinch of salt
- 1 tsp poppy seeds (optional)

Wet Ingredients

- 60g full-fat Greek yogurt
- 35ml half-and-half
(OR 20ml heavy cream + 15ml water)
- 22g melted butter
- 1 tbsp fresh lemon juice
- 1–1½ tsp fresh lemon zest
- ½ tsp vanilla extract

Optional Add-ins

- Few blueberries
- Sliced almonds
- Tiny pinch cardamom

Method

1. Preheat oven to 340°F (170°C). Grease 2 ramekins, 2 jumbo muffin cups, or 1 mini loaf pan.
2. Whisk all dry ingredients well and break any whey lumps.
3. In another bowl whisk wet ingredients.
4. Combine wet + dry gently.
5. Rest batter for 2 minutes so coconut flour hydrates.
6. If too thick: add 1 tsp half-and-half.
7. If too loose: add 1 tsp almond flour.
8. Bake 17–20 minutes. Check at 17 minutes.
9. Cool 10–15 minutes before eating.

Microwave Version

Microwave in a large mug for 60–75 seconds. Rest for 2 minutes.

Optional Lemon Glaze

- 1 tbsp powdered sweetener
- Few drops lemon juice
- Tiny spoon Greek yogurt or cream cheese

Approx Macros

Entire batch:

~410 calories

~25–27g protein

~5–6g net carbs

Per serving (2 servings):

~205 calories

~13g protein

~3g net carbs

Why this works

This is not an ultra-high-protein dessert. It's a smarter everyday dessert: moderate protein, low carb, and far more satisfying than standard lemon loaf.